A note from the Director

It is a testament to our community’s resilience and strength, that even during a pandemic the Guild’s membership season has started off with a bang. A big 'thank you' to all the members who have already renewed (if you missed the email you can renew online or email membership@forestguild.org).

Even during this pandemic there is lot going on for Guild members and for the forest. Our list of webinars by the Guild and partners is extensive! Too much for any one person to take in live, so we've also created a new webinar library to catch recordings of webinars you missed. We are disseminating information about wildfire resilience, celebrating our 25th anniversary with the spring issue of the Forest Steward, and creating stronger connections with student members of the Guild. Read about our ongoing CWPP work, how we are re-creating collaboration, a new book on Ecological Forestry authored by Guild members, job opportunities and much more.

For me, the Guild and our community is a bright star during a difficult time. Thank you for helping us maintain our guiding light.

NEWS FROM THE FOREST

"Half-Earth:" Reflections from graduate student Eric Hagen

“Half-Earth:” A wake up call, and the amount of land that needs to be dedicated to nature in order to save the majority of species on Earth from extinction. But how do we do it? And how do we both inspire and empower people to act effectively? I argue that we do it through nurturing relationships with the natural world, and simultaneously equipping people with the tools of modern conservation science. For my master's work, I partnered with the Vermont Alliance for Half-Earth to create web-based articles. These feature conservation tools and concepts embedded into stories about local people and their relationships to the natural world. I wanted to capture the emotional connection to the land that many of us feel but don’t always talk about, and tie in concepts like restoration silviculture and large landscape conservation design.

Advancing the Practice of CWPPs - Risk Modeling

Written by Corrina Marshall.

The Forest Stewards Guild has worked with many communities in New Mexico and Colorado to produce Community Wildfire Protection Plans, a program that began in 2003, authorized and defined in Title I of the Healthy Forests Restoration Act (HFRA) passed by Congress. For this installment of ATL, we share about our improvements to wildfire risk analysis. This is done by spatial analysis and wildfire behavior modeling based on vegetation data – that part is not new. What we have added to the CWPP process are products like evacuation modeling, post-fire erosion modeling, radiant heat & short- and long-range spotting potential, and treatment suitability analysis. A few examples below show the outputs from these models, a clear indication of where high priority treatments exist.

Re-creating Collaboration

Written by Leonora Pepper and Zander Evans.

The pandemic is forcing many of us to rethink how we work, particularly around collaboration. The Guild is meeting the challenge, at a time when collaboration is essential on all fronts. We have increased online learning opportunities, such as our webinar on Communicating with Landowners about Oak Resiliency. We’re sharing resources from partners such as Sustainable Northwest’s Resources and Best Practices for Adjusting to Remote Collaboration. The Guild’s Sam Berry and Gabe Kohler interviewed Jon Boe to get a more in-depth view over how Covid-19 will affect the fire season and Mike Lynch helped lead a webinar that looked at the 2019 Fire Season and the outlook for 2020 in the Southwest, which includes a discussion of fire management in the time of Covid-19.

Thank you to all of our Stewards Circle donors for supporting the Guild's work!

Organizational Sponsors

Thank you to our organizational sponsors! Your support is essential to fulfilling our mission of putting the forest first.
How to help

You can help us more confidently plan for the future and meet our 25th Anniversary Challenges! Set up auto-renew on your membership or monthly giving when you donate ($25 monthly puts you in the Stewards Circle, but no amount is too small). As always, you can also: become an organizational sponsor or join our Stewards Circle today! A donation at any level directly supports our forests. We welcome professional and affiliate members who advance the stewardship of forests across the landscape. If you currently have a gift membership, or are not a member, please join today! If you haven’t renewed yet, please renew now.

You can also support the Forest Stewards Guild by shopping on Amazon Smile for any holiday gifts you cannot buy locally. And, share our GuideStar Profile with anyone looking for an upstanding charity.

Notes

Check out our new webinar library webpage, where we will continue to collect recordings of completed webinars you may have missed! With everything on offer these days, you likely can’t attend everything live!

The Spring 2020, 25th Anniversary edition of the Forest Steward is now online. Enjoy!

Ecological Silviculture Foundations and Applications is a new book by Guild members Brian J. Palik, Anthony W. D’Amato, and Jerry F. Franklin, along with Norman Johnson. Classical silviculture has often emphasized timber models, fundamentally based in production agriculture. This book presents silvicultural methods based in natural forest models—models that emulate natural disturbances and development processes, sustain biological legacies, and allow time to take its course in shaping stands. Nice work everyone...this is so exciting!

NESAF Quarterly features awards for Amanda Mahaffey, Barrie Brusila, and other current and past Guild members! If you missed it in March, check out the ATL highlight on Amanda and Barrie during Women's History Month 2020.

Tick Survey: Researchers at the University of Georgia, Hollins University, Duke University, Clemson University and the University of Rhode Island are conducting a study (“Investigating COVID-19 impacts on the epidemiology of tick-borne diseases in people and pets”) to determine whether COVID-19 restrictions have had an effect on the time spent outdoors by people or their pets and whether this change is associated with an increased risk of exposure to ticks or tick-borne diseases. Anyone 18 or older and a resident of the United States or Canada can participate.

Publications and Research

Physiological responses of eastern hemlock to light, adelgid infestation, and biological control: Implications for hemlock restoration. Silvicultural treatments may improve long-term health and survival of infested hemlock trees and the integration of treatments with existing strategies deserves continued exploration.
